

Afua Twum-Danso Imoh is a Senior Lecturer in Global Childhoods and Welfare at the University of Bristol (UK). Her research focuses on children's rights, child rearing practices and the impact of historical developments and more recent social change processes on constructions of childhood. Much of this research has concentrated on Ghana and Nigeria. Her work has been published in a number of edited collections and peer-reviewed journals. She is the lead editor of three edited collections. Afua was the principal investigator for the British Academy-funded children's rights and representation project upon which this seminar series is based.
