Civil and criminal law interactions: the two extremes

- Cost- and time-efficiency
- No contradictory rulings

- Taking into account the different
 - purposes and interests
 - rights and duties
 - parties

Material interactions (1|2)

E.g. hospital directors' liability:

Mismanagement (art. 158 Swiss Penal Code):

- (i) management of assets
- (ii) breach of duty
- (iii) damage
- (iv) causal link
- (v) intent

Directors' liability (art. 754 Swiss Code of Obligations):

- (i) director
- (ii) breach of duty
- (iii) damage
- (iv) causal link
- (v) fault

Material interactions (2|2)

Criminal law dependent on civil law perspective

Interpretation of normative constituent elements of a crime explicitly or implicitly referring to civil law

- Limiting function of civil law:
 - «Any person who acts as required or permitted by the law acts lawfully even if the act carries a penalty under this Code or another Act» (art. 14 Swiss Penal Code)
- Civil law violation necessary, yet not always sufficient

Civil law dependent on criminal law perspective

Recourse to criminal law

- Wrongfulness in tort law (art. 41 Swiss Code of Obligations)
 - In case of pecuniary damages, case law requires the breach of a specific asset protection provision often found in criminal law (e.g. computer fraud, money laundering)

Procedural interactions

Criminal proceedings

Civil proceedings

In general independent proceedings, each with its own procedural rights, obligations and principles

Nevertheless certain interactions:

- Aggrieved person as a party to the criminal proceedings
 - Access to files → May be used in parallel or subsequent civil proceedings
 - May assert claims for damages caused by the criminal offence → To be decided by the criminal judge as part of the criminal trial
- Binding effect of a criminal conviction on parallel or subsequent civil proceedings?
 - Often factually binding, though not a legal principle (cf. art. 53 Swiss Code of Obligations)
