

OFFRE de STAGE – délai de postulation le 20.11.2020!

Interested in gender dimensions in sustainable finance?

The United Nations Sustainable Stock Exchange Initiative (<https://sseinitiative.org/about/>) is interested in engaging two interns from UNIGE (IHDS, STAREG, SOCIO or Gender studies) to study gender equality in the private sector. The task will be to collect data on the portion of women in the boards of G20 companies.

Your task will be to define the sample and collect the data; while the main aim is to uncover the gender (un)balance, other data points can also be relevant - such as contextualizing based on industry sector, or socio-cultural setting. Good practices can also be highlighted. You would need experience in managing large data sets, and excellent English skills; additional languages are a plus.

The internships would start on December 1 and are non-remunerated; that being said, the SSE is committed to providing students with an excellent internship experience, where their work will be recognized in any ensuing events or publications. Flexible working will also be available, allowing student to continue with their University course work while working on the project. Please send a cover letter expressing your motivation, as well as a CV by this Friday November 20, 6pm to the attention of : lisa.remke@un.org.

The SSE initiative is a UN Partnership Programme organised by UNCTAD, the UN Global Compact, UNEP FI and the PRI. The SSE's mission is to provide a global platform for exploring how exchanges, in collaboration with investors, companies (issuers), regulators, policymakers and relevant international organizations, can enhance performance on ESG (environmental, social and corporate governance) issues and encourage sustainable investment, including the financing of the UN Sustainable Development Goals.

Interested in gender dimensions in sustainable finance?

The United Nations Sustainable Stock Exchange Initiative (<https://sseinitiative.org/about/>) is interested in engaging two interns from UNIGE (IHDS, STAREG, SOCIO or Gender studies) to study gender equality in the private sector. The task will be to collect data on the portion of women in the boards of G20 companies. Your task will be to define the sample and collect the data; while the main aim is to uncover the gender (un)balance, other data points can also be relevant - such as contextualizing based on industry sector, or socio-cultural setting. Good practices can also be highlighted. You would need experience in managing large data sets, and excellent English skills; additional languages are a plus. The internships would start on December 1 and are non-remunerated; that being said, the SSE is committed to providing students with an excellent internship experience, where their work will be recognized in any ensuing events or publications. Flexible working will also be available, allowing student to continue with their University course work while working on the project. Please send a cover letter expressing your motivation, as well as a CV by this Friday November 20, 6pm to the attention of : lisa.remke@un.org.

The SSE initiative is a UN Partnership Programme organised by UNCTAD, the UN Global Compact, UNEP FI and the PRI. The SSE's mission is to provide a global platform for exploring how exchanges, in collaboration with investors, companies (issuers), regulators, policymakers and relevant international organizations, can enhance performance on ESG (environmental, social and corporate governance) issues and encourage sustainable investment, including the financing of the UN Sustainable Development Goals.