ORGANIZING INNOVATION IN INTERNATIONAL ORGANIZATIONS

The United Nations Office at Geneva (UNOG) and the University of Geneva's i2i Hub are delighted to invite you to the launch of the i2i Hub's new report "Organizing Innovation in International Organizations".

Innovation in International Organizations (IOs) is crucial to fostering transformation and achieving the Sustainable Development Goals. Many organizations are embracing innovation as core to their strategy and developing different approaches to "organizing innovation" in order to be more agile, flexible and forward-looking.

This interactive discussion will shed light on different approaches to organizing innovation, based on the analysis of the organizational designs for innovation across a number of IOs. Experts will provide insights on a mix of established and growing innovation structures, and highlight organizational innovation journeys, as well as the emerging roles innovators can play.

Light refreshments will be offered by UNIGE.
