

May 20 – 21, 2017

9:00 – 17:00

A workshop at the Confucius Institute
266, rte de Lausanne - 1292 Chambésy

SEESHOP #11

An international scientific workshop originated from Studies of Expertise and Experience, and Science and Technology Studies.

Darrin Durant, Melbourne University

Saving expertise

Michael E Gorman, University of Virginia

Trading zones, interactional expertise and moral imagination

Eric B. Kennedy, Arizona State University

Creating an interview-based IMGAME method for field research

Duan Chengrong, Renmin University

China's 250 million floating population

John McLevey, University of Waterloo

How do face-to-face and virtual networks shape the development of specialist expertise?

Jathan Sadowski, Arizona State University

Predictions and premonitions: algorithms as experts in sentencing and policing

David S. Caudill, Villanova University

Dirty experts: their use, and what they tell us about law's appropriations of expertise

Ann Potter, Manchester Metropolitan University

Judging social work expertise in care proceedings

Jaako Taipale, University of Helsinki

The usefulness of meta-expertise in examining judges' discrimination of evidence

Philippe Ross, University of Ottawa

How (well) do media professionals know their audience(s)?: a case study of Radio-Canada Ottawa-Gatineau

Colin Robertson, Wilfrid Laurier University

Environmental citizen science as a novel application for studies of expertise and experience

Shannon Conley, James Madison University

Developing a theoretical scaffolding for interactional competence: a conceptual and empirical investigation into competence versus expertise