

FLYING OR NOT FLYING?

Do you fly to work? Are in-person meetings essential to your activities? Or are you exploring other ways of networking and meeting ?

As part of an action-research project, the Institute of Sociological Research of the University of Geneva is looking for participants for a focus group on the use of flying for work-related travel (in English) and a focus group on the use of flying for academic-related travel (in French) in autumn 2020.

Focus group on the use of flying for academic-related travel (in French)

30 September between 12pm – 2pm

Focus group on the use of flying for work-related travel (in English)

3 November between 6.30pm – 8.30pm

LOCATION

Les 4 coins, Rue de Carouge 44, 1205 Genève

AN APÉRO-DINATOIRE WILL BE OFFERED ON LOCATION

Registration :

<https://bit.ly/3hh39XQ>

www.unige.ch/sciences-societe/socio/avionvdg

A diversity of profiles is desired, inclusive of age and gender. No special knowledge required.

FOR ANY QUESTIONS

rechercheavions@unige.ch

UNIVERSITÉ
DE GENÈVE

THE PROJECT

- What are the links between the use of plane and the professional sphere ?
- How can we reduce our use of the plane ? What are the barriers and opportunities in the professional environment ?

From business trips to holidays, flying is a part of our lifestyles, for many. There's nothing quite like flying when it comes to speed, both for passengers and merchandise. And yet, the contribution of flights to environmental degradation and noise pollution is consistently on the rise. Through focus group, we are seeking to engage people in a discussion around this theme.

