Welcome Message from the ESHMS President

Dear Conference Participants,

It gives me great pleasure to welcome you to the 16th Biennial Conference of the European Society for Health and Medical Sociology. The main mission of the ESHMS is to provide forums of interaction for active, innovative and critical social scientists devoted to the study of the sociological aspects of health and medicine. This year, I have a feeling that the theme of the conference invites scholars to explore the manifold impacts that technologies, policies and lived experiences enact on the health of Europeans and even people outside of Europe.

These conferences mark the highlight of the two-year cycles of our research society. As such, the decision to delegate the responsibility of hosting the conference is not taken lightly. For the 16th conference, we were fortunate enough to have the Department of Sociology at the University of Geneva as a local organiser. The local organising team has worked endlessly over the past two years to prepare a perfect conference for us. During our collaboration and exchange, I have been truly impressed with the expertise and efficiency of the local organising team. Therefore, I am convinced that the experience we will have will not only be memorable, but also particularly fruitful for scientific discussion.

I would also like to draw your attention to the prizes that the ESHMS traditionally awards. We will again award a best paper and a best poster prize. All presenters should also consider submitting their quality papers to a special issue of 'Social Theory & Health,' the journal with which we are affiliated. A call for papers will be delivered soon after the conference with the aim of showcasing the conference to a wider audience.

Finally, I want to thank the University of Geneva for providing us with the excellent facilities that further support our ambitious work. Looking back at the origins of the ESHMS, Geneva seems like an ideal and obvious location for the conference. Some of the main ambitions of the society's founders included bridging the gap between academic work and policy making as well as promoting comparative research across Europe and beyond. Geneva seems to be the ideal location to further these aims, as it is the host city to major international organisations in the field of health, from the World Health Organisation to the International Committee of the Red Cross.

I also sincerely hope that you enjoy the conference, both scientifically and socially, and thank you for your participation.

Welcome Message from the Local Organising Committee

Dear Conference Participants,

We are very happy to welcome you to the University of Geneva for the 16th ESHMS biennial congress. Under the heading 'Healthy lives: technologies, policies and experiences,' the congress aims at providing a forum where we can discuss the imperative of good health. As proposed in the call for papers, we consider that a range of developments – including the promotion of health literacy, personalized medicine, health and illness self-monitoring through mobile technologies, shared medical decision-making, and the rising individualization of risks in health insurance - support the normative importance of leading healthy lives. These developments affect not only the experiences of healthy and ill individuals and their relationships with healthcare professionals, but also public health policies and the monitoring of population health. At the same time, sociological research emphasizes the various constraints that limit individuals' abilities to lead healthy lives, such as socioeconomic inequalities, instability of family ties, increasing requirements in job performance, inequalities in access to health care and challenges associated with ageing. Furthermore, studies have documented how some individuals deliberately challenge the imperative for health and youth by refusing medical treatments, by adopting risky behaviours, or by criticizing health-sustaining technologies and strategies.

These contradictions between the dominant norm of leading healthy lives and divergent health practices and understandings will be at the centre of the congress's discussions. We have been very pleased by the interest generated by the call for papers, ending up with 225 accepted abstracts. You made it possible to put a programme into place that reflects the diversity of theoretical references in our domain and the respective contributions of qualitative and quantitative studies. In addition to the three promising keynote conferences, we are confident that the presentations in the parallel sessions will illustrate the dynamics of current research in the sociology of health and medicine. We therefore wish you three days of fruitful academic exchanges and hope you enjoy your time in Geneva.
