Climate and DRR Check

Guidance on how to integrate Climate Change Mitigation/Adaptation and Disaster Risk Reduction into Development Cooperation

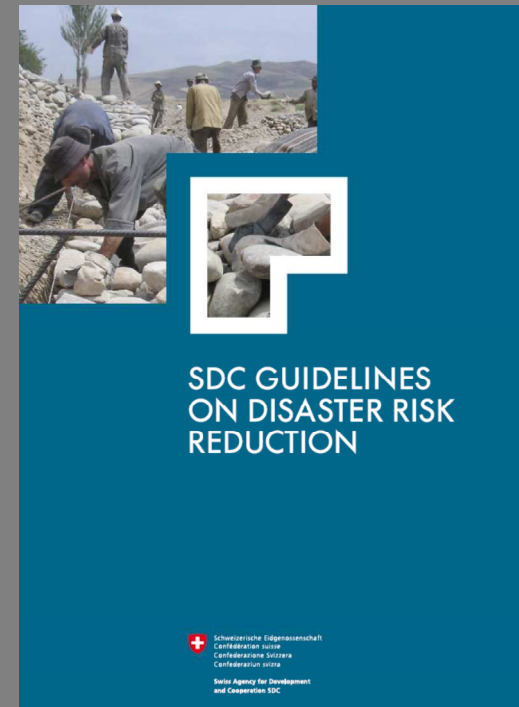

SDC Guidelines on DRR (2007)

DRR main expected effects:

- (a) existing risks emanating from natural events are reduced,
- (b) the further growing of risks through e.g. inappropriate development is avoided (protection of development gains),
- (c) changing risk patterns (e.g. climate change) are considered (life, livelihood adapted).

Strategic outline

a. Mainstreaming

Integration in existing SDC planning and operational processes
DRR is mandatory in countries with high or considerable risks and/or project activities with spatial relevance;

b. Targeted DRR activities

and DRR as dimension of everyday development cooperation;

c. Support to the international system at the regional and global level (UN, IFIs, regional initiatives, linkage with environmental conventions).

Swiss Humanitarian Aid

An aerial photograph showing a hillside in Haiti that has been severely damaged by a disaster. The hillside is covered in rubble and debris, with many buildings reduced to ruins. Some structures remain standing but are heavily damaged, with missing roofs and exposed interiors. The terrain is steep and appears to be a densely populated area before the disaster. The overall scene is one of devastation and the need for humanitarian aid.
